Poets and writers of re tilter have done your of their most there bundereds of miles from any coluhere beneficeds of miles from any com about nothing workly or home. But there have been at the stock me circumstances connected with in erments in the west, as known to the owboys of twenty five years ago, that was so unexpected as to be highly humorous. One of the first funerals to secur at Great Hend Kan, says the Philadelphia Times, possessed unprecedented circumstances enough to make it humorous, if the unexpected is an atribute of humor An old and somewhat disliked man.

Henry Turley, had been confined to his bed-several weeks by a disease which builted the skill of the would be phy so mas who attended him. He seemed to grow steadily worse and his death was courts expected. Then the cold weathwhich had continued for nearly a outh, was broken by a few spring-like lays. The citizens of the little settle sent took Turicy's case in hand and corded that as his death was certain occur in a few days at most, it was better to take advantage of the mild weather and dig a grave for him than to await his death and the probable return f cold weather, when grave-digging be extremely difficult. grave was accordingly dug. Turley vas so full of wrath at having his grave is bed and the same day left town in lisgust It appeared that he had been chamming all the time in order to obtain free victuals and care. Regrets were expressed that he had not been uried without waiting for the usual reliminary of death. The pleasans eather was seen followed by a severe form of snow and sleet. During the first night of the blizzard a bibulously selined attorney, tiedfrey by name. eing, as was his wont, in an advanced tate of intoxication, lay out all night the snow. Two days later he died om the effects of his freezing. His latives were telegraphed for and reconded that they would come immediately. The storm increased in violence lasting nearly a week, blocked the avenues of travel in every direction.

A tew days after Godfrey's death early the entire male population of the settlement congregated at the comomed jost office, saloon, grocery, etc., to swap stories, eat crackers and imbe whisky. When all hands were retty well warmed up, the subject of uriey's shameful deception and un cupied grave was freely discussed was decided that such a good grave night not to be waster, and that in order to make use of it Godfrey's re mains should be speedily interred in it This met the approval of all present. and, with the rade coffin in one wagon, and as many as could crowd into an other, and a number of horsemen at either side, the funeral cortege started in falling snow. The further the procession got from the starting point the more the and third beats and purse won by Nigger. mourners jumped from the wagon and aided the horsemen and dog in chasing and found to be partially filled with snow Then another attorney, who differed but little from the one in the coffin except that the latter was dead proposed, as there was no minister of the gospel present, to do his best to deliver a funeral oration. He had hardly got more than well started when some one shouted that the dog had started another rabbit. Away went horsemen, footmen, orator mourners and all in pursuit of the rabbit and dog, leaving teams, coffin and to take care of themselves The chase was long and exciting, as the dog, while always seeming about to get the rabbit, failed to do it. Left themselves, the team got tired of standing in the storm and ran away ple clube toward home. When the crowd straggled back the snow had filled the grave of and obliterated the wagon tracks. As the cometery consisted of only that greatest average number of players one grave and had no other marks to $25 to the team making least average distinguish it from the rest of the prairie, they were by no means certain of its location in the snow. So they trudged off home in the snow, and arrived to find the teams were there be ore them. It was not recovered till the snow had partially melted. more than a week later. Then the relatives arrived and took the body est with them.

There is a little world of pathos in the simple story of the first burial at Lawrence, Kan. Moses Pomeroy arrived from Illinois in 1854 and bravely to work to make a home for ear one left behind. By dint of much labor he improved his homestead considerably, and erected a tiny but com-fortable house. Then, full of high hopes for the future, he wrote for his vaiting sweetheart to come. The ourney, mostly by stage and wagon was a long one, and when she arrived the girl found that her lover had expired the day before.
